Brown Speaks to Seniors in Petersburg

Frank O. Brown Jr., a founder of the Virginia State Bar's Senior Lawyers Conference, recently talked about estate planning to senior citizens at A.P. Hill Community Center in Petersburg. Brown did his homework before he went—he contacted the local legal aid program and area agency on aging to make sure any attendee without the means to hire a lawyer could get help with wills, advance medical directives and powers of attorney. Brown's appearance was arranged through the VSB Speakers Bureau. He appeared on behalf of the Senior Lawyers Conference. To volunteer for the Speakers Bureau, fill out the form located at www.vsb.org/publications/speakersbureau/application-speaker.pdf and send it to the VSB.

Held Receives Richmond Bar Award

Richmond Bar Association President James K. Cluverius presented Allison L. Held with the association's John C. Kenny Pro Bono Publico Award for public service projects that included serving as program director for the Legal Information Network for Cancer. Held now practices utility and telecommunications law for the State Corporation Commission. In receiving the award, she said her work meeting the legal needs of cancer patients "gave them peace of mind."
