LEGAL ETHICS OPINION 417

COMMUNICATION WITH JURORS.

It is improper for a lawyer to communicate by letter with members of a jury his or her thanks for the manner in which they completed their service. While no one can disagree that jurors are entitled to be commended for their service, such communications by a lawyer would create at least the appearance of an effort to influence a juror's actions in future jury service in violation of DR:7-107(C).
