ETHICAL TIGHTROPE — Serving Your Client, Deciding Whether to Report Questionable Conduct, and Keeping the Peoples' Trust

Attorney General Jerry Kilgore will moderate a discussion of legal ethics, with an emphasis on giving legal advice in a corporate and regulatory world. The panel will address issues related to providing legal advice on business strategy and risk analysis, as well as issues concerned with representing corporations and advising employees of that corporation. Special attention will be given to attorneys who represent clients subject to regulatory oversight and who appear before government agencies. Topics for this panel include ethical obligations and conflicts related to providing legal advice on accounting and business issues, reporting potential misconduct by your client, and upholding your duties to the tribunal and to the legal profession. While the subject matter is designed for attorneys, all conferees are invited to benefit from this important discussion.
